

I fully support Senate Bill 22, although I strongly feel it comes up quite short as it is only providing “temporary” sales tax relief.

This should be a “permanent” sales tax cut.

Further, Senate Bill 22 should be just a starting point in relieving the burden of sales taxes on the citizens of Connecticut.

The next step should be a complete reassessment of sales tax on “Services”, specifically, sales tax on the essential services that people “must” use every day. Those services that are not for luxuries. That will have the potential of bringing real tax relief to the citizens of Connecticut.
